

Finkler Will Is Broken By Jury

Family "Skeletons" Stirred During Testimony

A unanimous verdict breaking the will of Henry C. Finkler, supreme court clerk for 50 years who killed himself a year ago at his home west of Redwood City, was returned Thursday afternoon in the court of Superior Judge George H. Buck.

The nine women and three men jurors upheld the contest brought by a half-sister, Miss Christina Finkler, who was cut off with $10 in her brother's will, and five nephews and nieces. The jury adjudged that (1) Finkler was of unsound mind, and (2) that the will was drawn under the influence of M. J. Purcell, one of the two men who were bequeathed the majority of the estate and a respondent in the trial.

Immediately after the verdict was announced Hall C. Ross, one of the respondents' attorneys, made a motion to set aside the verdict. This will be argued before Judge Buck at 9:30 o'clock Saturday morning.

The jury retired at 1:32 o'clock Thursday afternoon and returned to the court with the verdict approximately an hour later.

Stirring of old family skeletons to place the stigma of insanity on the family of Henry C. Finkler, late California Supreme Court secretary, was decided this morning by Attorney Lee T. Ross on behalf of the defense in closing arguments in the Finkler will contest just before noon today.

And he was followed by Attorney J. E. McCurdy, representing the side of Miss Christina Finkler, half-sister of the deceased, who was cut off with $10, who told the jury that the Finkler will was the "most unusual, most cruel document ever heard of."

Attorney Samuel Knight, of Hillsborough, in opening arguments to the jury on behalf of Miss Finkler's case, cited the family record of the family to prove that Finkler was the "victim of hereditary insanity." He said that Finkler's father had committed suicide, the same as Finkler had done in Redwood City on November 18, 1930, and that his mother, and his sister, Clara, were at one time confined in state institutions.

Knight also declared that B. Grant Taylor, clerk of the supreme court, and one of the two legatees to the $55,000 estate, admitted from the stand that he believed Finkler was of unsound mind from November 1 to November 18.

He was followed by Attorney Lee Ross, who called Miss Finkler "a remarkable old lady of 81." He then cited that it was "too bad that she had to come into this court and stir skeletons to place the stigma of insanity on her family."

In McCurdy's arguments to the jury, half a score of the eccentricities and delusions of Finkler were cited to show that he was of unsound mind at the time he made his will on April 21, 1930.

McCurdy cited the following acts to convince the jury that Finkler was of unsound mind:

The building of an airplane in the attic of his home west of Redwood City, his jumping out of a wagon to pick up two onions in the gutter in front of the court-house; similarly picking up two pieces of coal; the carrying of sand from San Francisco in small containers until he had filled two barrels full; the carrying of his will in his hatband.

Finkler also believed that he held the key to San Francisco's water supply and could, by shutting off a valve on his property, cut off that city's supply, it was testified. He also had plans to dig a tunnel from Redwood City to San Francisco.

Hall C. Ross on behalf of the respondents argued that it was not fair to judge a man on the size of paper on which his will was written, citing that in 1904 he wrote one on a very small note page and similarly made interdications in the present disputed document.

Testimony of Chief Justice William H. Waste of the state supreme court was a feature of the trial yesterday afternoon. The chief justice eulogized Finkler, whom he knew well.

The relatives seeking to break the will are: Mrs. Christina Finkler, the half-sister, of San Francisco; Aurelia Hanlan, San Mateo; Sumner Waite, Long Beach; Mrs. Edith Waite Stewart, Wenatchee, Wash.; Bernice Macaire and Emmett Brophy, of San Francisco.

MIDDLEFIELD BRIDGE FUNDS ARE VOTED

San Mateo Supervisors Give $5,000 Share Toward Project

The San Mateo County Board of Supervisors voted $5,000 toward reconstruction of the San Francisco creek bridge on the Middlefield road. Supervisor John W. Poole of Redwood City announced that work will begin as soon as weather conditions permit.

Funds for the purpose were voted by the board on a resolution introduced by Supervisor Poole and seconded by Dr. C. V. Thompson, Burlingame supervisor.

Santa Clara county has its share available for the work in Supervisor C. P. Cooley's budget, and Palo Alto may also share in the cost of the wider and safer structure. No funds have been provided, however.

Plans call for a 40-foot roadway in place of the present 26-foot width. The grade of the bridge will also be lowered so that motorists will have a better view of oncoming traffic. The west side of the bridge structure will remain in place, but will be repaired.

The east side of the bridge will be torn out and rebuilt to make possible the widening. Radius of curb lines will be enlarged to make safer travel possible. Plans were drawn by City Engineer J. F. Byxbee of Palo Alto, and County Surveyor James S. James.

Sewer Costs Protested
Mrs. W. C. Wrenn of North Fair Oaks protested to the board of supervisors on the cost of sewers installed across her property, saying the originally estimated sum of $80 has jumped to $700.

She told the board that an understanding was had with Robert A. Klassen, engineer of work, that her property, which is in lots, would be assessed as acreage, but that this was not done.

Her complaint was referred to District Attorney Edmund Scott. Precincts Selected

An order creating 200 voting precincts in San Mateo county was adopted by the board of supervisors as recommended by County Clerk Elmore B. Hinman.

The Sixth Judicial Township, embracing the city of Burlingame and other territory of the Fifth Supervisorial District, was created by ordinance of the board.

Frank Olmo, owner of a 480-acre ranch, asked the board to repair the road running from Pescadero between the Big and Little Butano creeks, which he declared impassable in wet weather. The matter was referred to Supervisor Manuel Francis.

MORE TIME GIVEN TO FLOOD RECORD

Two additional weeks in which to correct and complete the 3085 page James L. Flood will contest transcript were granted by Superior Judge Franklin Swart at the request of counsel.

Will H. Girvin, court reporter, announced that the corrections, nearly all typographical in character, have been made upon the original transcript. In addition, respondents have asked for the inclusion of a great deal of additional matter.

RED CROSS WILL AID COMMUNITY CUPBOARD

This money, with that remaining from last year, will give the chapter about $1000 for the coming year.

Attention was called to the fact that the community gave $1500 to drought relief also, through the Red Cross, although the city's quota was only $1100.

The chapter has been supplying cigarettes and writing paper to disabled veterans in the hospital near Menlo Park, and future contributions will be considered by the executive committee and officers in February.

Reports were given by A. W. Russell, chairman of the first aid committee; Kenneth Bennett, of the junior Red Cross at Sequoia high school; Mrs. Zoe Thorpe, of the elementary school; Mrs. M. S. Cooper, chairman of home hygiene; Mrs. Harry Potts, production chairman; Mrs. A. J. Weiss, on the number of hours spent by various chapter workers; Mrs. Viola Poole, home service chairman; Miss Ann Bullivant, treasurer; Miss Cora Clute, dental clinic and Mrs. George Hopkins, nominating committee.

The chapter voted its thanks to the Lions Club, which conducted the roll call, and to the other service clubs and the Women's Relief Corps for their assistance.

Officers elected for the new year were Mrs. Z. T. Thorning, chairman; Mrs. Viola Poole, vice-chairman; Mrs. Mary Winter, secretary; Miss Ann Bullivant, treasurer. The directors elected were Mrs. Winter, Mrs. Thorning, Mrs. Zoe Thorpe, Elmore B. Hinman, John Gill and Thomas Vernal.

Members of the executive committee named were Mrs. M. S. Cooper, James D. Hedge and Carroll D. Hall.

Support given to the local chapter by the community has been so good that the finances of the organization are in excellent shape this year. It was reported by J. Milton Johnson, head of the Lions Club committee in charge of the recent roll call, that nearly $1100 worth of memberships and donations had been received. Part of this goes to national headquarters and the rest remains for use in Redwood City.

ADRIAN JONES KILLS SELF IN SAN FRANCISCO

Son Of Well Known R. C. Family Suicide Near Police Station

Despairing because of his inability to find employment and feeling that he was "too old to live at home anymore," Adrian E. Jones, 24, of 311 Spruce street, shot himself through the heart in San Francisco Monday.

Young Jones chose the rear driveway of the Southern police station at Fourth and Clara streets for his deed. He was found lying only a few feet from the San Francisco morgue house stationed at the police department.

Deputy Coroner Anthony Trabucco of San Francisco was inside the police station when the shot was heard. He was the first to reach the youth's body and found a note addressed to the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Adrian S. Jones, 311 Spruce street. Mr. Jones is employed at a Redwood City tannery.

In the note, written on the stationery of a Fourth street hotel, the youth said, in part:

"Dear Father and Mother: I know you don't want me to do this, but I'd rather stop now. I can't do anything without someone puts the words into my mouth. Please try not to remember me. I always try to do as you said. I am getting too old to live home any more—Adrian."

Deputy Coroner John Layne took charge of the body. Besides his parents, the youth is survived by a sister, Mrs. Ernest R. Hoffman Jr. The family is well known in Redwood City fraternal circles.

ELIMINATION OF FLAGMEN SOUGHT

The Southern Pacific Company wants to eliminate the 15 flagmen employed on five grade crossings in Redwood City, and substitute mechanical warning signals.

Two engineers of the state railroad commission and one from the railroad company were in conference with City Manager E. A. Rolison and City Engineer C. L. Dimmitt Tuesday afternoon regarding the matter.

The S. P. maintains that its plan is one of greater safety, but the city manager has not yet been fully persuaded that such would be the case. It is expected that the city council will be asked to consider the proposition.

Citizens' Apathy in Unemployment Relief Locally Subject of Report

Exotic Star Stricken at Studio

Poll Negri, noted screen actress who recently returned from a three-year stay in Europe, is under observation in a Santa Monica hospital after collapsing in a studio while at work on a new picture. She is shown here in the living room of her beach house, one of her most recent photographs.

Residents of Redwood City do not consider the unemployment situation serious.

Business houses are not clearing their employment needs through the mayor's unemployment relief committee.

The attitude of most of the residents leaves the impression of disinterest.

Contributions have been below ordinary expectations.

These are some of the conclusions drawn in a report made to Mayor Daniel R. Stanford's General Committee for Unemployment Relief at a meeting in the city hall Monday night.

Other conclusions are: Contractors are employing labor from outside communities.

Home owners have not responded generously to the appeal for odd jobs.

Funds to date have been insufficient.

It is estimated that a minimum of $5000 will be needed to handle emergency cases only, until April 1. Any lesser sum will mean curtailing activities.

The committee has before it the following recommendations:

That some plan be devised to raise money, possibly through a benefit show or a New Year's Eve supper dance.

That personal solicitations be made by committee members, of individuals able to give money.

That more emphasis be placed on the need of clearing employment needs through the committee.

That county authorities be requested to care for their share by organizing to feed and shelter the itinerant in an adequate manner, as well as attending to the employment needs of citizens outside the corporate areas; or that, in the latter case, they clear their needs through the local committee for at least a portion of their work.

The report of Maj. G. H. Pryor, in charge of registering the unemployed, follows, in part:

"Present indications are that our resources will be exhausted on December 24, and all activities for which the committee is responsible will cease as far as employment of needy men is concerned."

"Donations have not reached the sum that might be expected, although those who have given have been generous. It would seem that in a community such as Redwood City, where the majority are secure in permanent positions, more help could be expected for this project."

"Many residents of this community are more ready to pay wages, no doubt, contributed to other outside funds for the purpose of assisting the needy and unemployed. This action is commendable but the impression remains that those doing so have neglected or overlooked the necessity existing in their own home community."

"Many residents voice the opinion that need does not exist in Redwood City. This comes from lack of dependable information. We, who come in contact, daily, with needy people, know how desperate they are. How badly they need work. The only solution is more funds to pay wages. Serious consideration should be given to this need. It is suggested that, if we do not help these people voluntarily, it will be done by some constituted agency and we will pay in a compulsory manner."

Registration records are classified to show the trades claimed by the registrant and are extended to show evidence of citizenship when available. Additional information is listed to assist in determining need. Where registration indicates actual destitution names are furnished as that agency deems advisable.

WIDOW IS SUING FOR RESCISSION OF REALTY DEAL

Alleging that she was shown one 40-acre tract of land in Yolo county but sold another, Mrs. Linda Malwitz, box 229C, Menlo Park, a widow, has on file with County Clerk Elmore B. Hinman a complaint for rescission of contract.

Defendants are E. G. Hinds, Charles and Florence Hinds, San Mateo County Title Company and three "John Does."

Hinds, acting as the asserted agent for Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hinds, took Mrs. Malwitz to Yolo county on August 5 to show her the property, the complaint states. She was told it belonged to one Kenneth Cable, but later was told it belonged to Mr. and Mrs. Hinds, she avers.

On August 20, Mrs. Malwitz agreed to buy the property. She gave a deed of trust for $5513.23 secured on three parcels of land in Paraiso Park, Menlo Park, for the land, $1000 cash and a promissory note for $540.

In November she visited the property shown her and was informed by the owner that to his knowledge he had not sold it. She then looked up the property described in the agreement and found it was "inferior in value," she alleges.

Because of default on the note, executed by Andy Monte, she seeks to enjoin the title company from disposing of the Menlo Park property. She also asks to have the agreement of August 20, and the deed to the Yolo property, declared void.

Manders & Clarke, Redwood City attorneys, are representing the widow.

Woodside

It is the unusual that brings the thrill, and the small boys of Woodside were thrilled over the week-end by the sight of snow on the western hills, in the same way that a certain small boy of the middle-west was thrilled, many years ago, by a photograph of children picking oranges in California on Christmas Day, while at his own home the basement was red hot and the windows were coated on the outside with a half-inch of frost and the fences and out-buildings were completely hidden under drifts of snow.

Mr. and Mrs. George Shine celebrated, last week, the 25th anniversary of their wedding. When summoned on Saturday evening to the home of William Byrne, it was to find thirty-two of their relatives gathered from all about the bay region to do them honor. The table in the living room was loaded with silver anniversary gifts and the table in the dining room was loaded with good things to eat. With games and with feasting the celebration extended well into the early hours of Sunday morning.

The children of the Woodside school beat Santa Claus to it by a full week. On Friday afternoon, at a Christmas celebration in their class rooms, they sang songs and played games about the Christmas tree and exchanged gifts with each other. On the evening of the same day they were entertained at a Christmas party in the school auditorium, by the Parent-Teacher Association and the Fire Department. At this party the pupils presented the following program:

Rhythm Band.....Primary Grades
Christmas Carols.....Upper Grades
Piano Duet.....Marian Neuman and Barbara Neuman
The Three Cousins.....Primary Grades

During the Christmas week last year, from a high point in Woodside, one could count an even dozen of glittering living trees, their many-colored lights gleaming like jewels through the night. This year, many more are to be added to the number. Electricians are already at work stringing the many-colored light bulbs among the branches of fir and cedar and pine and redwood trees, to send forth their message of cheer and good will.

The Woodside Sunday School will hold its annual celebration on the evening of December 28th. Miss May Huddart, superintendent of the school is drilling the children in their parts for the Christmas play.

Mrs. Josephine Winkler and her two children, will spend the holidays with friends in San Francisco.

The communication of Treasurer Ryan, asking for information regarding the disposition of street improvement bonds, was filed.

The Blue Moon dance hall was granted permission to keep the hall open on New Year's Eve to 2 o'clock of the next morning, to accommodate the dancers. The permission is granted every year.

J. P. McGlone, who recently purchased the Smith property on Doyle street, in a lengthy communication asserted that the fence on the holding was removed, during the time the street work was in progress in front of the dwelling. He declared that it was valued at $20, and he wanted the city to pay the claim. McGlone, in a short address said that the fence was placed in another lot, and that he had removed it to his own property. It was taken from there, together with a 20-foot ladder, some time later. The council referred the matter to the chief of police for investigation.

Action on the amended zoning ordinance was continued for one week. By resolution, the assessment diagram for Resolution of Intention 31-7 and 9, was approved and confirmed by the council. By consent of the property owners on Live Oak street, the matter of lights was continued indefinitely. He died at the barracks at San Diego. He was the first young man on the peninsula to become a martyr to the great cause.

A vast traffic goes over the span at this point, necessitating a safer and larger conveyance. The structure will cost in the neighborhood of $10,000.

Menlo Park is rapidly becoming a Green Park, owing to the numerous marriages taking place here. On Tuesday, Judge Hoss united three couples in marriage, and last week he performed two ceremonies. It must be the happy marriage in the knot by the genial judge that attracts the many matrimonial prospectors.

Wednesday, James Regan, a retired detective sergeant from the San Francisco police department, passed away at his home on Crane street, from heart disease. He is survived by a wife and one daughter. Mr. Regan was well-known in this city. He had an enviable record in the San Francisco police department.

BRIDGE FOURSOMES FAVORED BY HOSTESSES FOR YULETIDE

WITH the holidays just around the corner, hostesses find bridge foursomes, either in the afternoon or evening, a more satisfactory way of entertaining their busy friends than larger parties, and with contract bridge players adhering to favorite systems, it is also a satisfaction to group one's guests according to their preferences.

Some of these foursomes have been playing together for a long time. One, which has met regularly during the past three years, includes Mrs. William J. Dusel, Mrs. O. M. Van Duyn, Mrs. Caswell D. Swett, and Mrs. Amelia Steffens. While Mrs. Steffens has been in the east, Mrs. L. E. Werder has taken her place.

Mrs. W. H. Moulthrop, Mrs. John Kestley, Mrs. Walter Malm and Mrs. Calvin Grandi form another coterie that meets twice a month for luncheon and cards.

A quintette has worked out a system whereby all play, and those belonging to this number are Mrs. Thomas W. Cutting, Mrs. Willis E. Ayer, Mrs. D. M. Salsbury, Mrs. W. H. Moulthrop and Mrs. Sam Baxter.

Members of one group gather each Monday afternoon. They are Mrs. John Munday, Mrs. C. O. Leach, Mrs. D. W. Brewer and Mrs. Theodore Arthur of Palo Alto.

Meeting frequently for their favorite bridge game are Mrs. Walter T. Kellogg, Mrs. Roy Cloud, Mrs. Lester F. Prior and Mrs. Herman Gumpel.

Mrs. J. W. Leggett of Atherton was chairman of those members of the Chi Omega Mothers' Club who acted as hostess at the meeting of the Stanford Mothers' Club Tuesday afternoon.

Kiwanians At Leadership Conference

Ten members of the local Kiwanis Club attended the leadership training conference of Division 2 at the Athens Athletic Club in Oakland Tuesday. The conference was presided over by Lieut.-Gov. A. B. Cargill of Burlingame.

After a general dinner meeting at which Arthur Streilow of the Alameda Club was presented as the newly elected lieutenant-governor of division 2 by Past Governor Abe Leach of Oakland, the meeting broke into groups composed of presidents and directors, secretaries, and district trustees. Among other speakers, Sam H. Winklebleck, retiring president of the local club, spoke before the presidents and directors' conference on the functions of club directors and committees.

Those who attended from Redwood City were President-elect John Gill, Vice-President-elect Charles Nelson, District Trustee-elect Herman Phillips, Secretary George Erskine, P. E. Brand, W. O. Tyson, Americo Rossi, President Sam Winklebleck and John Layng.

Menifee was chairman of the meeting which followed dinner in the Emerald Lake Golf Club at 7 o'clock.

Chinatown Tricks Described In Talk By Police Officer

For ways that are dark... the heathen Chinese is peculiar.

Or so it would seem, judging from the tricks practiced by smugglers of opium and gamblers as described by Inspector John Manion of the Chinatown squad, San Francisco Police Department. The inspector was the principal speaker at the regular Tuesday night dinner meeting of the Redwood City Exchange Club in Hotel Sequoia.

The officer illustrated his talk with samples of opium, heroin, morphine, cocaine, pipes, daggers and other souvenirs of police raids in the past. He said that the British government was responsible for the blight of opium on China.

Although San Francisco's Chinatown is the largest in the United States, it is comparatively free of professional gamblers and narcotic "joints," according to the inspector. "Long war deaths have been reduced in number also, he said.

Guests present Tuesday included Officer Walter Martin of San Francisco; Officer S. E. Douglas of the Redwood City police; Thomas Kane and the Rev. W. R. Catton of Montrose, Colo. Mr. Kane sang two songs, and spoke on plans for the club's annual Christmas party for children at the Sequoia Theater next Tuesday afternoon.

James Eva was chairman of the evening, and Pres. Edmund Scott introduced him. Harvey Conner and Dr. W. B. Langston advocated the club's continued contribution to the Community Cupboard.

It is planned to make this the largest affair ever given by the club, and it will be the first given in the new auditorium. A 50-cent ticket entitles the holder to dancing and cards. Both will begin at 8 o'clock.

UNEMPLOYMENT

(Continued from Page One) live in surrounding communities, viz.: Menlo Park, San Carlos, Atherton and areas outside the limits of Redwood City. These are a minority and it is safe to say that the average registered to this date is five years within the corporate limits.

A number of applicants have presented themselves who are residents of San Mateo. All these have been turned away.

Many registrants cannot furnish evidence of citizenship as required by law for employment on public works contracts. All these have been advised as to the methods of establishing citizenship.

One hundred jobs have been listed to date. Of these, 77 have been filled. The remaining 23 were not filled for one or another of the following reasons: applicant not willing to work for the wages offered; applicant unsuitable for the work; applicant not able to fill requirements of position although satisfactory; applicant sent out but found position filled; employer changed mind after applying for help. All positions have been filled. None remains vacant.

Results from the house to house canvass to stimulate work have been disappointing. It is noted that there have been few calls from business houses for help, but there has been a "steady stream of itinerants sent to the office of the committee by the merchants regardless of the fact that publicity has been given to the information that this committee does not handle the itinerant. It is understood that the county authorities have accepted that responsibility."

The largest single outlet for employment has been through the committee. An average of seven have been employed and paid by the committee. These men are changed every three days and, as far as possible, duplication has been avoided. There have been six men who, since November 1, have received six days work and three men who have worked five days. The balance has been less than five and in most cases three or less. Many have not worked at all. To date the committee has paid wages aggregating 148.7 men days.

Relief was extended to four families, but with the organization of the Community Cupboard, all relief work has been discontinued by the committee, the report states.

Opening of the First Congress

The convening of the 72nd Congress on December 8 in the national capital brings forth some interesting facts from the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission about the meeting in Federal Hall, New York City, of the First United States Congress.

Congress was to open on March 4, 1789, but on that day, however, only 21 members of Congress were present, eight Senators and 13 Representatives, not a quorum for either house.

Day after day, week after week, the members present met in Federal Hall, which had been done over for their accommodation. But it was not until the first day of April that any business could be transacted because a quorum was lacking. On that day, 30 members of the House having answered to their names, the body was organized and Gen. Frederick Muhlenberg was chosen Speaker.

The Senate did not get together until April 6, when a quorum was finally mustered. A temporary presiding officer, whose sole duty it was to open and count the electoral votes, was elected. George Washington had the vote of every elector, which was generally known, and was therefore, President. The second votes of electors were widely scattered. John Adams had the next largest number and was therefore Vice-President, although he did not get a majority of the whole number of electors appointed. It was two weeks before Washington could be apprised of his election and reach the seat of government.

It is difficult to realize in this day, when Senators and Representatives arrive by airplane, train and motor, what an achievement a journey was in the days of the first United States Congress. It took a day and a half to make the trip from Philadelphia to New York. The fastest traveling might bring the "Representative" from Charleston in 10 or 12 days, weather and roads permitting. Through certain sections of the country it was necessary to proceed for days at a time, with mud up to the hubs of the chariot wheels. Members from the far South came by steamer.

Taverns were indifferent in service and often so crowded that the members of Congress were loathe to leave their homes and families for the uncertain comforts of the long highway to the seat of government.

Wealthy New York citizens had contributed the sum of $32,000 for the purpose of remodeling the old city hall, repainting and renovating the building, which, when completed, received the new name of Federal Hall, and was placed by the city council at the disposal of Congress. These alterations, incidentally, were made by Major L'Enfant, who later laid out the city of Washington.

The appearance of the hall was impressive for those days. The basement story in Tuscan style with seven openings and four massive pillars in the center, supported by heavy arches, above which rose four Doric columns. The cornice was ingeniously divided to admit 13 stars in the metopes, which, with the eagle and other insignia in the pediment, and the sculpture of 13 arrows surrounded by olive branches over each window, marked it as a building set apart for national purposes.

The entrance on Broad street opened into a large plainly furnished room, to which every one had free access, and beyond this was the vestibule, which led in front to the Hall of Representatives, and through arches on each side. The vestibule was paved in marble.

The Hall of Representatives was somewhat octagonal in shape, with niches for statues at intervals. The windows were about 16 feet above the floor, the fine wainscoting below, interrupted by four great fireplaces. In the panels between the windows were trophies carved, and the letters U. S. in cipher surrounded the laurel.

The Speaker's chair was on an elevated platform, opposite the principal entrance. Each member had a separate chair and desk. Guests of the members were seated in two galleries in front of the Speaker's dais. The general public was admitted only to an area on the floor outside the bar. In this room, the windows were hung in light blue damask, the chairs covered with the same material.

The Senate chamber was if anything more elegant than the Hall of Representatives. It was approached by stairs on the east side of the vestibule, through an antechamber, communicating with an iron gallery as well as with the Hall of Representatives. There were three windows at each end, those toward Wall street opening into an outdoor gallery 12 feet deep and guarded by an iron railing. It was in this gallery that George Washington took the solemn oath of office, the packed throngs witnessing the ceremony for an instant in adoration of their idol and leader.

First to Ratify Constitution

December 7 is an important date in the history of the state of Delaware and indeed, in the nation. On this date in the year 1787 the Diamond State passed its resolution of ratification of the Federal Constitution. The date is doubly significant as Delaware was the first in the original 13 states to do so. In spite of her small size, Delaware had always been at the fore in matters of national import. She had contributed to the Revolution in money and men, and had presented a great leader in the person of John Dickinson, whose influence was to be felt throughout the new nation.

The story of Delaware's ratification, according to the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission, is as follows: After the War of Independence, when the former colonies of Great Britain found themselves free from the mother country, they discovered that all their problems were not yet settled. Many perplexities confronted them, threatening to plunge the new nation into chaos and anarchy. All agreed that the old Articles of Confederation were now wholly inadequate to meet the needs of the new nation. The people themselves were influenced in their opinions by sectional interests, while the states, with their jealousies and restrictive ideas of local sovereignty, presented anything but an appearance of national unity.

Finally the situation became so acute that a convention was called to consider and effect a revision of the Articles of Confederation. This convention, growing out of the Annapolis convention which had been called by Virginia to settle trade disputes in 1786, met in Philadelphia in the summer of 1787. It included in its personnel most of the leading men of the country. George Washington, the great commander-in-chief of these, revolutionary forces, was elected president and the momentous discussion was soon under way. Among the members of this great body were Benjamin Franklin, from Pennsylvania; James Madison from Virginia, and Alexander Hamilton from New York. Delaware sent George Read, Gunning Bedford Jr., John Dickinson, Richard Bassett and Jacob Broom.

The session was held behind closed doors and for long weeks of hot debate and compromise, appeared the Federal Constitution, an innovation and an experiment in government. The completed document was sent to the states for ratification on September 28, 1787, on which date began another long struggle, this time to secure the approval of at least nine of the states, which constituted the necessary majority to put the Constitution into effect.

John Dickinson, delegate from Delaware, on his return home from this convention, wrote a series of nine pamphlets signed "Fabius" in which he discussed the Constitution and urged its adoption. George Washington wrote his approval of these documents, before he knew the identity of their author. Dickinson's efforts were an outstanding contribution to the political literature of the time and undoubtedly went far to influence the popular mind in favor of the Constitution. When the state legislature met in Delaware on October 24, it immediately adopted measures to call a convention for the purpose of adopting the Constitution. This convocation met in Dover on the first week in December and acted with surprising dispatch. The resolution of ratification was unanimously passed on December 7, 1787, and Delaware thus became the first state to adopt the Federal Constitution. Only two other states, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, took action that year.

MULE BEATS AUTO
JACKSONVILLE, Fla.—In a powerful auto, dry agents attempted a raid on a liquor cache hidden in a swamp. The operator of the still, however, heard the approach of the car and mounted a mule to escape. Off he trotted down the road. Officers, anticipating an easy capture, sped after him. The mule, however, took to a swamp as they neared. The car attempted to follow, but found the swamp tough going. They abandoned the chase.

Jane Addams and Nicholas Murray Butler, dividing the Nobel Peace Prize this year, join a distinguished group so honored. The fact the award goes to two Americans and is coupled with the announcement that this country has stood foremost in peace work, just as it has among those nations to which the prize has gone in the past thirty years, can only be gratifying to patriotic thought.

The two recipients, each in his way, are conspicuous workers in the cause of international understanding. The Jane Addams program, perhaps, has been the quiet one with life and example dedicated to the cause. Dr. Butler, scholar and orator, has been called upon to deliver important messages in many countries and has never failed to voice his plea for the peaceful ways to settle the international questions.—Oakland Tribune.

IS OUR RADIO SYSTEM IDEAL?

In his address to the National Association of Radio Broadcasters, President Hoover pointed out the difference between the radio control systems here and abroad and praised the development of radio here under commercial control, which he said had avoided government broadcasting supported by a tax on the listener. While the American system has undoubtedly merits it has at the same time certain defects, perhaps not necessarily inherent, and the president might have done well to point them out at the same time he was emphasizing the merits. The American system has resulted in far too many broadcasting stations, for one thing; the radio commission itself admits that reception would be far better in this country if the number were cut in half.

Aside from this technical reason, the multiplicity of stations has caused intense competition among them for business, which has resulted in the acceptance of sponsoring advertising which in many cases is highly objectionable.

Advertisers of a kind long since barred from respectable publications—including fakes and frauds which would not dare advertise through the mails—have found free entry to the air under this commercial-control system, and there seems to be little effort on the part of broadcasters to protect the public in this regard. The law has not yet developed sufficiently to give adequate protection, either, since use of the air in a scheme of fraud is not yet criminal. Nor is the public as yet adequately protected against slander and libel by radio.—Los Angeles Times.

ORDERED TO SMILE

INDIANAPOLIS.—Jude Stonehouse's face lights up with an occasional smile now and then as the result of a recent order by Judge Cameron. Stonehouse was up before the judge on a charge of injuring his daughter, Mildred. She stated that in addition to physical hurt, her father hadn't smiled at her for four years. "I believe it would crack your face if you smiled," the judge told Stonehouse. "It isn't enough to support your family. You better smile when you go home."

VISITS JAIL—STAYS

MANITOWOC, Wis.—Visiting the county jail to claim some carpenter tools left there in 1928, Carl Lindquist stayed to enjoy its hospitality for 20 months. It seems that Sheriff Herman Carstens recognized him, remembered his escape in 1928, and looked up records to learn that Lindquist still had 20 months of a two-year term to serve.

Suomi is the native Finnish name of Finland.

Dr. Meyer gives two simple rules which if followed would prevent poisoning by botulism. First, all home-canned vegetables and other non-acid foods should be thoroughly boiled before use. Second, the person who opens the container and prepares the contents for the table should be familiar with the standards of quality and should ruthlessly discard any product which has leaky lids, an off odor, or other signs of spoilage.

Home-Canned Foods Dangerous

These rules are necessary, Dr. Meyer points out, because the greatest source of danger from botulism or food poisoning is from home canned foodstuffs. By experimentation and the adoption of definite regulations concerning food preparation, commercial canneries have reduced the possibility of food poisoning from their products to a minimum, and no case of poisoning has been traced to commercially prepared food from American canneries since 1925. California has led the way in this campaign for safe foods, and has effected a system of control which should restore complete confidence in the safety of its canned products.

Concerning home canning, Dr. Meyer says: "It has been suggested that botulism due to home-canned foods could be prevented provided the antiquated methods of preservation by the cold pack method should be replaced by sterilization in a pressure cooker. Doubtless sterilization under pressure has enabled many a housewife to reduce the excessive spoilage due to under-sterilization, and hence botulism. But few, if any, of the people who have been victims of botulism in recent years had either the money or the intelligence to use a pressure sterilizer; they continue to can the few products of their garden or even buy as cheaply as possible vegetables which have been harvested and stored for several days. Poor raw material that is heavily contaminated is the principal source of their troubles. It is exceedingly doubtful if, under the conditions of the average household, such goods could be rendered harmless by pressure sterilization.

Other Methods Advocated

"These and similar considerations have led public health workers to advocate the preservation of non-acid foods by drying, by curing in 10 per cent brine, or by pickling in acidified brine. Aside from being simple and inexpensive these methods have the one great advantage that the food is not ready to be served from the jar, but requires thorough soaking in water and sometimes subsequent boiling—the greatest safety device against botulism. Until there is an end to the custom of serving home-canned string beans and other vegetables cold as salads, often heavily seasoned with vinegar or mayonnaise dressings which disguise any suspicious odors, botulism intoxications may be anticipated. Every farmer's wife feels qualified to preserve vegetables in a glass jar. Spoilage is frequently so slight that even a competent observer may be misled. Moreover, the unboiled contents of many jars may have been consumed without bad effects and thus a false confidence leads finally to the disastrous meal. Neither laws similar in character to that promulgated by Emperor Lex in 905 for the purpose of preventing botulism due to blood sausages, nor official supervision, which is obviously impossible, but only the education of the masses as to the necessity for boiling all home-canned vegetables before use will prevent the frequent and needless deaths from these products."

POP'S COLUMN

I knew a man once whose name was John Smith. I think he was a Methodist, but I'm not sure as to the fact. To the best of my knowledge and belief he is now dead. But it isn't important whether he is or not. That is to say, not important especially to anybody except him—John Smith. Because, as I have lately been informed, the name of John Smith is not unique in nomenclature. Comes now, in support of this thesis, one Bay Hayes, who is by way of being a city clerk, and one thing and another, in this bailiwick, who exhibits a clipping, from which I am privileged to glean somewhat, as follows:

"Common" I presume "general" or "catholic" is the word really meant here "as it is, the name Smith is spelled many different ways, but pronounced as 'Smith.' John Smith is not indigenous to the United States alone. He is numerous in all countries on the globe, and the different ways in which he spells his name proves the need of precaution in asking him to spell it if you are a stickler for correctness. The Kalends of the Waverley Press gives the different kinds of John Smiths in various countries as follows: England, John Smith; Germany, Johann Schmidt; Holland, Jan Schmit; Spain, Juan Smithas; Greece, Ion Skmiton; Poland, Ivan Schmittowski; Russia, Ivan Skmittowski; China, Jahon Schmitt; Italy, Giovanni Fabroni; Scotland, John Gowans; Ireland, John Gowen; France, Jean Lefevre."

So there you are, John Smith. You will have had to do a lot of dying if you have died in all those different countries, and under all those different names. That is, if you really are dead, as I have been led to believe. The last time I saw John Smith (third person, singular number), he was about 70 years old, and that was about 40 years ago. He was my uncle, something that he didn't like. As a matter of fact I did a great many things that he didn't like; almost never did anything that he DID like. But that particular time, I had riled the old feller a little more than usual. I remember that we met in the high road, and he had a young hickory sapling about six feet long, and half as thick as his wrist, and he mentioned that he intended to wear it out over my back. Now, a young hickory sapling had an awful lot of wear in it, as I remember, and I knew the old man was not in a fit physical condition to expend all of the energy that would be required to wear out that particular sapling in the manner in which he proposed to wear it out; so I gracefully, and out of consideration for my uncle's well being (I hope you believe), sidestepped somewhat; about sixteen feet, in fact, and in a right-angled direction from where my uncle was standing, so that I was just leaving a certain spot in the road when the first whack of that sapling landed on that spot. If I had been on the spot at the time, of course the whack would have landed on me. But I wasn't. I was in Judge Alexander's meadow, going due north at the rate of about a mile in less than nothing flat, and gradually accelerating my speed. I was so considerate of my uncle's physical condition, his age, and my own back, and many things; so I proceeded away from there for some time. I didn't look back to see whether John Smith was pursuing me, or not. I never saw him again. I took care not to. Poor old feller, he only lived about 20 years after that, they tell me. Passed out of life prematurely one morning in January at the age of 90 years and some months, days and so on. He was in his barn yard lambasting a sorrel filly that had displeased him in some way, when he fell dead, and stayed that way thereafter. I sometimes wonder if my running out on him that day in the road didn't hasten his demise? If I really believed it did, I should never smile again—much. I don't smile an awful lot anyway, and a little more abstinence in that line wouldn't be so much to do. Not if it would make my uncle feel any better, supposing he is in a position to feel at all.

John Smith—not this one I've been babbling about, but another one entirely—had an affair with an Indian lady, one Pocahontas, as I recall. He almost lost his head over the girl, they tell me. This leads me to conjecture as to whether or not these variously-spelled John Smiths are all such an impetuous, quick-trigger sort of fellows? My uncle John wasn't impetuous in some ways. I remember that he owed me a quarter once for helping him plant corn several days, and he wasn't the least bit impetuous about paying me. If he was moved to any great depths of desire to give me that two bits and be done with it, he suppressed the emotion better than any feller I ever knew. I thought he never was going to pay me. I think it was something I said to him about the matter that brought on the affair of the hickory sapling, and so forth. I remember I did tell him that he was a tight-fisted old skinflint, or something like that. I told him that before I noticed that he had that young hickory sapling in his hand behind his back. If I had seen the sapling I'm sure that a decent respect for his grey hairs (and the sapling) would have impelled me to a more deferential form of address. This other John Smith, though, was a regular feller, I guess, from all accounts. I believe he married the Indian lady and they lived happily ever after (each other). But history is an uncertain jade; you think you know a lot about things that happen, long time back, and then you find out those things never did happen, and where are you? I reckon Henry Ford wasn't so crazy when he said that all history is the bunk, or words to that effect. Great feller, Henry. But to return to John Smith; or rather, to return to a discussion of him. I'd hate like story to actually return to the place where I think John Smith really is now. This John Smith was the feller who taught everybody to chew and smoke tobacco. Some say it was Sir Walter Raleigh. I don't think so. I never knew Walter. His folks and mine never neighbored back and forth any. My folks were very particular in their neighborhood. So I'll stick to it that John Smith was the discoverer of the joys of tobacco, both smoking and pitting. My land! The feller must have done SOMETHING with the heart of a pure young Indian squaw, the way he did. He wasn't a bootlegger. We read:

"Then spake the blushing Pocahontas:
'I will follow you, my husband!
Follow closely in your footsteps;
Follow everywhere you lead me.
Do not try to shake me, John Smith.
Or I'll knock your bloomin' block off!
I will cleave your ribs asunder!'"

Harry Hillman Drops Football For Water Polo

Harry Hillman, Stanford's football captain and fullback, intends to try out for a place on the Stanford water polo team in anticipation of participation in the Olympic tryouts in Los Angeles next July.

Hillman made known his plans Monday, and while it caused some surprise on the campus at first, it was later pointed out that the Stanford captain while best known in an athletic way for his football playing, performed quite well in the water sport while a freshman. It is recalled that Hillman scored 11 goals against the California frosh team four years ago, and on the 10th goal he threw the ball with such force as to break the net.

Hillman's participation in water polo depends on his plans after leaving college. He graduates in March and may go east immediately or stay at Stanford as a graduate student.

The Stanford water polo team won the junior national championship last year and the seven players will be intact for the Olympic Games. Hillman, if he decides to stay at Stanford, will try for the center back position.

Bears Strive To Reach Peak For Tech Game

BERKELEY. — Condition is the factor foremost in the minds of University of California football coaches and players as they are completing preparations this week for the California-Georgia Tech game December 26 in Atlanta.

The Golden Bears are striving to regain the peak of condition, physical and mental, which they reached for the "key" games on their regular schedule, and are finding the process strenuous. Coach W. A. "Bill" Ingram and his aides have made no attempt to schedule the players thus far and have run very little signal drill to date, concentrating on blocking, tackling, individual line and backfield play, "wind sprints" and conditioning exercises. Their program does not imply that several hard sessions of scrimmage are not ahead for the players before they enter for Atlanta Sunday morning, however.

While the Bears will scrimmage offensively and defensively, without doubt, their defensive scrimmage will be limited to general methods of defense. The rival coaches, Ingram and W. A. Alexander, have entered into a non-scouting agreement, so that the Golden Bears will know nothing of the Yellowjacket attack before the game.

Reserve strength in the backfield has been considerably augmented by the recovery from injuries of several outstanding backs, including George Watkins, Gus Castro, Ray East, and Joe Catollica.

Local Teams Capture Two Basket Tilts

Sequoia's 130-pound basketball team nosed out the Sacred Heart lightweights of San Francisco by a score of 14 to 13 and the Cherokee varsity followed the pace by chalking up a 23 to 4 win over the Irish unlimited quintet in a doubleheader practice tilt on the Sequoia court Tuesday afternoon.

Howland, a newly discovered guard, took Shine's place for the afternoon on the Purple 130s and proceeded to take individual honors on three long field goals and a free throw. Two other shots by Howland rimmed the hoop and indicated that the boy has the best shooting eye on the team.

Coach Ray Dimick's team took an 8 to 6 lead at half time but stood by to watch Sacred Heart tie things up at 11-11 as the third quarter ended. A field goal by Howland and a free throw by Pomes put the Cherokee into a substantial lead for a defensive game, but Hawkins of Sacred Heart looped a field goal to bring his team back into the running with two minutes to play.

The Cherokee missed a flock of free throws that would have made a victory more certain, and Sacred Heart added a few thrills by hitting the edges of the bucket. Sacred Heart showed good shooting ability when opportunities showed up, but the Indians had a superior floor game. However, a stall in the final minutes nearly proved disastrous to the Sequoians as they toyed with the ball under their own basket.

Coach Frank Griffin's "shock troops" easily stole the show in the varsity game. Elbert Garcia, who finds time to play center when he isn't busy as yell leader or secretary of the board of athletic control, did all of the scoring for the Cherokee during the first half. Overhead shots he picked up last year from watching Bob Alber netted him four field goals, and he threw in a free throw for good measure. Only a close-in shot by Connelly of Sacred Heart kept the visitors from a shut-out in the first half.

The so-called "shock troops" had several good ball handlers on the starting lineup, including Art Bladell and Johnny Costa, forwards, and Ed Abbott, guard. Jens Bugge, who is developing into a key man on the Cherokee offense as well as a first class guard, was the only regular to start.

McGuire and Bjorkquist, forwards; LeRoy, center, and Bugge and Ed Matheson, guards, made up a combination which started the second half. This outfit outscored Sacred Heart, 13 to 2, although Bill and Bud Lewis contributed several of the points.

Sequoia meets St. Ignatius high school of San Francisco in a twin engagement here this evening, and on Saturday evening will play two games at Salinas.

Sequoia Hoopsters Play St. Ignatius Tonight

With two consecutive double victories over Santa Cruz and Sacred Heart high schools chalked up in their last two starts, the Sequoia high school basketball team is scheduled to play the St. Ignatius cagers of San Francisco in the Sequoia gymnasium this evening at 7:30 o'clock and Salinas high school there Saturday night.

The Cherokee will play against the same type of zone defense as they mastered in the Sacred Heart games when they take on St. Ignatius tomorrow night, either Coach Ray Dimick of the 130-pound team nor Coach Frank Griffin of the varsity quintet is certain of his starting lineup against St. Ignatius, but a "shock troop" combination is certain to take the floor for the unlimited battle.

It is possible that Howland, dead-eye hooper of the 130-pound squad, may be shifted to a forward berth by Coach Dimick. While working at guard in the absence of Carl Shine, played Sacred Heart, Howland displayed an accuracy in shooting that is a significant discovery in view of the generally poor basket work of the 130s. Shine and Pomes are good guards and fair shooters, but none of the forwards, including Dower, Swanson, Baxter and others, have been able to pop them through the ring, hence the possibility of transferring Howland.

Haas, Baughn or Krogh at center.

New Clubhouse Is Issue At Meeting Of R.C. Sportsmen

Members of the Redwood City Sportsmen's Club held a closed business meeting Monday in the fire department hall on Middlefield road, with Pres. George E. Zehender presiding.

The chief item to come before the group was the proposed clubhouse which the sportsmen's club plans to erect on municipal property adjoining Redwood High. Pending the report of the club-house committee, of which A. S. Ligouri is chairman, definite action on the club's plans was postponed until the next meeting.

Motion pictures on outdoor life prepared by the Associated Sportsmen of the Redwood City and San Mateo County Chamber of Commerce film on San Mateo county will be shown at the next meeting of the sportsmen's club December 28, to which the public will be invited.

Local Teams Defeat P. A., Bank Quints

By EL THOMAS
Redwood City Eagles and Native Sons basketball teams chalked up their second consecutive double victory of the season Wednesday in the Sequoia high school gymnasium at the expense of the Hibernia Bank quintet of San Francisco and the Peninsula Creamery team of Palo Alto, respectively.

In the heavyweight game, the Eagles led all the way to a 34 to 13 win over the Bankers. In the preliminary contest, the Native Sons came from behind a 16 to 14 score at half time to outscore the Penery five 19 to 5 during the final two periods for a final total of 33 to 21.

Johnny Weir, with his cool calculations on shooting and his clever floor work, starred at forward for the Eagles with five field goals. His cross-fire of passes to Gene Jordan and Tom Shine kept the Hibernia Bankers off balance and enabled any one of the three Eagles to score at nearly every opportunity. Shine dropped in three long shots and Jordan also contributed three field goals to boost the Eagle total.

Toby McLaughlin fitted in well with Shine to give the Redwood City outfit a dependable guard combination, while the defensive work of Ed Cullen, forward, was outstanding. Although Cullen scored five points, including an overhead surprise shot, his best work was in smothering the Bankers' scoring attempts and recovering countless rebounds off the backboard.

Thiele, a new center from San Mateo, and Lutje, Langbehn and Stacy, former Sequoia cagers, were the replacements for the Eagles. Cuthbert Currie, who played ter and any two of the five possible forwards will be shifted in choosing the front line that takes the court tomorrow night. The two guard positions are fairly certain.

The "who cares" attitude of the varsity quintet has accomplished its purpose in limbering up the players, and the results have been most noticeable among the so-called "shock troops." Disregarding the score, the reserves go through their plays to the best of their ability, sink all the shots they can and stay in the game as long as they give a good account of themselves.

Without realizing it, these substitutes have contributed a large share of impetus to the three straight wins the Cherokee have registered after getting off to a poor start this season. Coach Griffin's formula seems to be: Take any combination, it doesn't matter much, except that it needs Bugge to hold it together, and let it play as long as the score is fairly even. Then send in what looks like a first string and just wait around for the final score, favorable or otherwise.

The "first string" includes Bladell and McGuire, forwards; LeRoy, center, and Bugge and Matheson, guards. The starting lineup will probably be Bjorkquist and Costa, forwards; Garcia, center, and Bugge and Abbott, guards.

AVIATION MONEY

NEW YORK. — Aviation's production for 1931, as estimated by Charles L. Lawrence, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, will total as follows: 2,620 planes valued at $19,289,445 and 3,566 engines valued at $13,424,290. This represents a total value of $32,713,735. About 70 per cent of this amount has been sold to the war and navy departments.

basketball at Sequoia high when he formerly lived in Redwood City and who is now in the Stanford law school, was one of the Peninsula Creamery players who put their team out in front of the Native Sons at half time and for a while threatened to win. Negus, former Palo Alto high school center, kept pace with Currie in scoring three field goals, but the Native Sons opened up their big guns in the second half.

"Frenchy" Campagne, forward, cut loose to score five field goals and three free throws for a total of 19 points. The Native Sons' scoring was well distributed among all the players, with Sid Hinman running second with eight counters. The steady pace set by the Sons forced the Penery cagers into a defensive battle in the second half and even then they were pulled out of position to give the Native Sons chances to score.

CARD MENTOR IN FAVOR OF PRESENT CODE

By RAY LEAVITT
Basketball will continue to be played under its present rules for some years to come despite the efforts of many leading coaches to bring about major changes in the rule book.

That is the belief aired by John Bunn, Stanford basketball coach, who declares that the 12-foot basket, elimination of the tip-off and the center court zoning plan will require further study by the Basketball Coaches' Association before a decision, one way or the other, is made.

Makes Report
Bunn, a member of the research committee, appointed by the coaches' association to determine the value of the proposed changes, declared that he has sent his report to "Phog" Allen, Kansas University mentor and committee chairman, which contains the viewpoints of western coaches on the proposed innovations.

While Bunn frankly admits a 12-foot basket, two feet higher than the present standard, abolition of the tip-off and a new system of center zones, can be readily applied to basketball play, he feels that they will not improve the game to the degree that proponents claim. Of the raised basket, Coach Bunn says:

Long Shooting Game
"I conducted experiments with it last spring at Stanford and discovered that it resulted in a long shooting game, which cut down team play to a comparative minimum."

"While it does, as claimed, take away the advantage of the taller player over the shorter in shots under the basket, players showed a tendency to shoot from the center of the court, which, while eliminating much of the roughness under the basket, also cut down passing and team work."

Cuts Scoring
"I found that long shooting cut down the scoring percentage about one-third, although 'Phog' Allen disagrees with me in that respect, claiming that it makes for more accurate shooting."

"One concrete fact, which more than any other, makes the 12-foot basket idea impossible at this time, is that many of the high school, athletic club and junior college courts have not the ceiling space to allow for raised baskets."

The 12-foot basket had been advanced as an argument against the abolition of the tip-off which has been gaining in favor for many years. Zoning of the court at four different angles around the center is also a compromise suggestion of those who wish to keep the tip-off. The zones, it is claimed, will prevent injury and crowding on the tipoff play while at the same time also taking the advantage away from the taller center.

Bunn believes that the advantage of the taller center is over-emphasized, claiming that well coached forwards on the team supposedly at a disadvantage, have just as much chance of gaining possession from the tip-off.

ELKS HANDICAP AT TANFORAN TOMORROW

Nearly all of the stars of turfdom now stabled at Tanforan have been nominated for the Elks' Handicap to be run tomorrow (Saturday) for a stake of $5,000 added. Elks from all parts of San Mateo county and San Francisco are planning to attend the event being held in their honor at the San Bruno track.

Following are some of the prize performers listed to go in the handicap: Jim Dandy, Masterly, Hey Diddle Diddle, Brown Wisdom, My Dandy, Foolhardy, Morphous, DeSwayze, Mopeco, Listo, Aguro, Sidney Grant, Polli Douris, Golden Prince, Plunging Sun, Tonto Rock, Suitor, Wirt G. Bowman, Scimitar, Sun Dot, Russcenes, Rara Avis, Golden State and Peggy G.

Larry Arnold was well in the lead this week for the meeting among the jockeys. He has brought in a total of 26 victories during the present meeting. His nearest competitor is D. Porter with 21 to his credit. The meeting still has three weeks to go, however, and a slump on the part of either of the two high riders would seriously jeopardize their chances for first place.

More unusual things have happened at the present meeting of the association than have happened at any of their previous meetings.

One of the most unusual was the refusal to sell options on Kamali last Saturday. The horse is known as a notoriously bad actor at the post. Another thing out of the ordinary was the declaring of a race as no contest, when one horse broke through the barrier and started the others around the track without any signal of the starter.

Many horses once sold for extraordinarily low prices have stepped out of the cheap class at Tanforan and found themselves winning stake races and raising their rating very decidedly. Masterly now a prize mount and entered in the Elks' Handicap, once sold for only $800.

SPOILING THE CHILD

PORTLAND, Ore.—When the automatic furnace came in and the old-fashioned woodstove went out, the proverbial rod also took its exit and with it came the spoiling of the child. Gen. C. H. Martin opines. "The rod," he says, "is in excellent condition, but the child is devoting his time to increasing the juvenile courts' records. Lawlessness began when father put the rod away and let his boy develop his personality without any curbing hand."

Brazil, with an area of 3,176,358 square miles, has a population of 39,800,000.

forwards on the team supposedly at a disadvantage, have just as much chance of gaining possession from the tip-off.

SHRINKAGE IN FAMILIES; INCREASE IN RADIO SETS

The Federal Census Bureau has made public some new figures with relation to the families of the nation. One point of interest is reduction during the last ten years in the average size of families. The decrease is from 4.3 to 4.1. On the other hand, there was an increase in radio sets. The bureau says that of almost 30,000,000 families in the United States in April, 1930, more than 12,000,000 families, or over 40 per cent of the total of all families had radio sets.

The decline in "population per family," it is stated, has been steady since 1890, having decreased from 4.9 in that year to 4.7 in 1900; to 4.5 in 1910; to 4.3 in 1920, and to 4.1 in 1930.

The term "family," as used by the bureau in this census statement, "signifies a group of persons, whether related by blood or not, who live together in one household, usually sharing the same table." One person living alone is counted as "a family." At the other extreme, "all the inmates of an institution, or all persons living in a boarding house," are styled a "family" in these recent census statistics.

The smallest average population per "family," by the way, is stated as 3.5, in California and Nevada. Nothing is said as to whether the increase in radio sets had anything to do with decreases in the size of families.—Sacramento Bee.

PICTURES IN THE AIR

WASHINGTON — The United States Army Air Corps has been doing some valuable work in aerial photography. According to a report of Maj. Gen. James E. Fechet, chief of the air corps, flying photographers of the corps have photographed from high altitudes areas of the earth as large as 19,400 square miles. He also reports that the corps has developed a special aerial film with which it is possible to take pictures at sunrise and sunset.

NORWAY—U. S. LINE

OSLO.—Regular airplane service between Norway and the United States is being planned for summer. According to Capt. Meisler, director of Norwegian air routes, who has announced plans for the line, it will travel over Greenland, making the jump across the Atlantic ocean to reach America some place in Labrador.

LET 'EM CRY
MONTREAL. — Hard-hearted landlords and complaining neighbors were given a jolt here when the circuit court ruled that a family cannot be evicted from a house because one of its offsprings sets up lousy bellows now and then. The ruling insisted that crying is a normal occupation for a normal baby and that it is not grounds for cancellation of an apartment lease.

THIS TAKES THE CAKE
SEATTLE.—Luther G. and Ida G. Severance, who came to Seattle from New York in 1887, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary recently. The odd feature of the celebration was the knife used to cut the anniversary cake. It was 200 years old and was brought over from Scotland by the great-grandparents of Mrs. Severance.

COLUMBUS. — The conscience of a man may be still small voice, but it sure works wonders. A burglar recently took $45 from the Lawndale Pharmacy here. Thomas J. Ryan, proprietor, has just received a letter from the burglar stating that his conscience was bothering him. He enclosed $38 of the loot he had stolen.

WEEKLY REPORT ON CONDITION OF HIGHWAYS GIVEN

Mountain roads out of Chico are reviewed as follows:

Bucks' Ranch road, open from Oroville to Merriam, where it is closed by snow. Chains are advised on the last four miles. Humboldt road, open and good from Chico to Stirling City, but not advisable beyond that point. Humboldt road, open from Chico to West Branch, where it is closed by snow.

The road from Nevada City to the town of Washington offers only fair conditions. It is rough and muddy and tire chains are advised. From Washington to Graniteville considerable mud and snow is met, necessitating use of chains. A snow storm would close this road overnight.

Between Las Vegas, Nev., and Kingman, Ariz., a new road is now in use. The road extends from Las Vegas 32 miles to a ferry over the Colorado river. The distance from the opposite bank to Kingman is 82 miles.

Good travel conditions prevail on El Camino Real, U. S. 101, between San Francisco and Los Angeles. At Bradley there is a short detour and shoulder oiling is being done between Santa Margarita and Atascadero, without affecting traffic.

With plenty of snow and a series of new slides and toboggans, winter sports are being enjoyed at Mineral, on the Lassen Volcanic Highway. Mineral is reached from Red Bluff over good oiled surface.

GAY ADVENTURERS BY MILDRED BARBOUR

Chapter 67
"DON'T BE RIDICULOUS!"

Harry decided, when he reached Baden-Baden, that it would take considerable courage to present his case to Miss Sophia Belden, and it did. She listened to him with an air of indulgence that later changed to complete astonishment.

When he had finished his story, she merely said:
"Now say that all over again. I'm not sure I got it the first time."

Harry obediently went over the situation once more.
"Sounds impossible. Is impossible. Can't be anything else. Don't be ridiculous!"

Having delivered this opinion, she settled back in her chair and looked at him challengingly.

"Nevertheless," he said doggedly, "I think someone ought to look into this thing. And you're the person to do it."

"And, in the meantime, you want me to believe that the girl I saw at Cannes is not my niece, that she's impersonating Constance, and that Constance is— heaven knows where?"

"I don't ask you to believe anything. I merely state my suspicions and tell you the basis for them," answered Harry.

"Well, they hardly appeal to me," said Aunt Sophia acidly. "If you were so full of suspicions, why didn't you state them when I was dragged to Cannes on that wild-goose chase?"

"We—for a while, at least, I thought she was spoofing us," said Harry. "Then, when you accepted her, we were disarmed, particularly when she said nothing of all this to you."

"What idiots! Who sent for me? The message was signed with Constance's name?"

"Bellefonte sent it. And he and the Barronne decided that nothing should be said as to what Constance—if she was Constance—had said about—about—"

"About not being Constance," Aunt Sophia finished grimly.

"Exactly."

"As for Bellefonte," she went on, "I should suspect his motives in giving a penny to a blind beggar. If he sent for me, signing Constance's name to the message, and then talked the rest of you into saying nothing as to why I was wanted, there must be something wrong somewhere. But where? And why didn't this girl make her protests to me?"

"That's what we must find out," Harry declared.

"But why bother? Why not let him attend to the matter?"

"His methods," said Harry, "might not suit the situation." Aunt Sophia nodded. "I see that you are familiar with them. . . . But tell me, if this girl is not Constance, where is Constance? Are you really convinced that she is living in an obscure little place under the name of Allen?"

"I'm not convinced, but so many strange things have happened that I can't just stand by any longer and let matters drift."

"I'm always worrying about motives," said Aunt Sophia, "and, if your suspicions are warranted, I'd like to know what's back of the whole thing. In fact, you've made me so curious, that I'll leave for Cannes at once, and we'll get to the bottom of this riddle."

Having made her decision, Aunt Sophia carried out her preparations for departure with such speed that she and Harry were off within a few hours.

"I hope you'll marry Constance, once this is straightened out," she said. "That is, if you can find her. Don't let anything that her father says stop you for a moment. When he was married, he didn't have enough money to pay the minister. He borrowed it from me."

By the time they reached Cannes, Harry had made an ally of Aunt Sophia, and he set out for the Villa Mora with a feeling that, no matter what might happen, she would make it come out right somehow.

"I have only one request to make," she had said, "and that is that you let me handle the situation in my own way. I won't be interfered with at any time." Harry assented, feeling as if he were dealing with an older and more determined Constance. "And no one is to know that I am in Cannes until I am ready to announce the fact," she added.

On the morning Aunt Sophia and Harry reached Cannes, Sheila's spirits were at a particularly low ebb. She had seen Constance the day before, and had been depressed by the fact that the girl seemed to have lost all her fight. She had pinned her hopes on her father. His arrival, she thought, would clear up everything. In the meantime, she didn't want to see anyone, didn't even care for news of what was going on.

Sheila was telling Dr. Mac about her visit to the pension and, although he didn't speak of it, he was telling himself that she seemed to have lost a good deal of her fight, too.

"My one desire, Malcolm," she had said, "is to get as far from all this as I possibly can. I want to go home. I want to cook and keep house for you. I never want to see another butler, or have another breakfast in bed. And I don't want any more adventure or excitement. And I don't want you to move to the city. I want you to stay a country doctor, far removed—"

Dr. Mac thought that these were the sweetest words he had ever listened to. He resented the interruption when a maid appeared to say that some one wished to speak to Miss Kerr on the telephone. Sheila's thoughts jumped instantly to Constance.

She seized the telephone and then dropped it and stood staring at it. Dr. Mac moved to pick it up, but she waved him away, and took the instrument in her hand again. A voice that had just a touch of grinniness was saying, "And, of course, I want to see you as soon as possible. Can you come to my hotel? I'm at the Pyramides."

"Yes," Sheila managed to breathe.

"What on earth has happened," cried Dr. Mac. "There isn't a particle of blood in your face. You look as if the end of the world had come."

"It has—just about," she sighed.
